The humane officer made arrangements to have the child cared for by an aunt. Willey's wife deserted him several months ago and has not since been heard from.

PRAISE THE LONG TRAIL.

Out-of-State Parties Are Making Use of It Increasingly.

The Mountaineers in the Boston Transcript say:

The Long Trail of the Green Mountain club, an organization of the State, is attracting considerable attention among mountaineers. In this fact is a suggestion of what its popularity will be when it shall have been completed. The local press notes the increasing use of it by out-of-state parties. The Appalachian Mountain Club party of ten or eleven, who have been in the State for some time, are being unable to make the expected mileage did some of the "jumps" in automobiles. The party walked from Killington to Lincoln and riding thence to Waterbury climbed Camel's Hump. There was a white awe from Brandon and Lincoln that was regarded as a suggestion of the condition of the country. It is certainly a bit of the ruggedness of mountain tangles and with trails along its length will be of the greatest attractiveness to trampers.

A party of five from the vicinity of Boston is reported to have tramped the trail from Marshfield to Hardsburg. This includes the delightful stretches into the Adirondack North from the summit of the Green Mountain to the summit of the Adirondack, the less well marked trails to the river, the climb of Camel's Hump, and the tramp along the recently cut fire-breaks, thence to Lincoln, from which Hardsburg is easily to be reached.

Those who know the delicate beauty of the country between Stowe and Johnson will be pleased to learn that it is the intention of Mr. Barnes, who has his home in Smuggler's Notch, to keep his camp open through the summer. There has hitherto been no convenient way to study this great rift in the mountains save by the single-day trips from Stowe or a base. There is hardly to be found a gap whose sides are so precipitous and whose exploration is afforded climbing worthy the name is his who tries to reach the lakes of the Adirondack on the shoulder of Mansfield, yet the summit is not difficult, thanks to a bit of the Long Trail that drops here into the valley. A more rugged way is by the Ice Line, a fire-guard swath that drops three thousand feet.

A SLAM AT FATHER.

Baby had been displayed in his best bib and tucker to a number of admiring callers. The last one looked him over and was evidently trying to think of something nice to say. Finally she remarked: "Dear me, how much he looks like his father!"

"It's only the warm weather," replied his mother, somewhat testily. "The child is usually quite cheerful and handsome."

PRESIDENT BENTON ON TRIAL

Ohio Druggist Seeks to Recover Damages of $20,000.

Case Grows Out of Prosecution for Alleged Illegal Sale of Liquor Three Years Ago While University Executive Was at Miami.

Trial of the $20,000 damage suit of Hugh M. Moore of Oxford, Ohio, against President Guy Potter Benton began yesterday in Chittenden county court. Some time was spent in empanelling a jury, after which the plaintiff's case and the case for the defense were outlined. The introduction of evidence for the plaintiff was begun by calling President Benton to the stand. There followed a long, grueling examination of the witness by Attorney V. A. Bullard, interrupted frequently by objections and demands for exceptions on both sides.

This case which was entered in Chittenden county court in July, 1912, came up at the September term in that year, when the defendant's demurrer to the declaration was sustained. An amended declaration was filed in February of this year. The case grows out of a prosecution for alleged illegal liquor selling, brought by President Benton when he was president of Miami University.

The plaintiff is a young physician of Oxford, Ohio. Dr. Hugh M. Moore, a graduate of Miami University and Johns Hopkins medical school, and son of a trustee of Miami. From the time Dr. Benton became president of Miami University in 1902 until September, 1910, Dr. Moore was a medical director of the institution. In February of the same year he had become interested in a drug store in November, 1909, Dr. Benton is alleged to have filed a complaint against him in the local magistrate's court, charging him with the illegal sale of liquor to a man named Norman Sweeting on a certain evening of that month. This case went against Dr. Moore in two courts and on appeal to a still higher tribunal it was dismissed. Dr. Moore now comes to Vermont to sue on the case.

He caused his prosecution. He claims the action in Ohio was brought maliciously and without probable cause. Dr. Moore's lawyers are V. A. Bullard and John J. Enright of this city, and C. L. Hopping of Cincinnati and M. E. Bickley of Hamilton, Ohio. The Miami University authorities are here with President Benton in this case growing out of his action on behalf of the trustees of the university. Judge John Van Deman of Dayton, to assist in the trial. President Benton's local lawyers are Judge C. H. Darling and Judge E. C. Moser.

After Mr. Bullard had outlined what the plaintiff would attempt to prove, Judge Van Deman addressed a few eloquent words to the jurors. He characterized the suit against President Benton as "a gross outrage and nothing less." He said the evidence would show that since the case arose Dr. Benton had been in Ohio in the company of his wife and that there had been opportunity for suing him there if the plaintiff had wished to.

On the witness stand Dr. Benton proved a rather too fluent witness, and several times the court stenographer was forced to cry for mercy. A good part of the examination of this witness was given up to an apparent attempt to extract from him some admission of having at one time or another had a falling out with Dr. Moore, which would help make the existence of malice more probable. The witness was asked to recollect, if possible, a difference which he and Dr. Moore might have had over the hiring of a nurse for two sick students, but could remember no such incident. Asked if he reprimanded Dr. Moore for his attitude on the liquor question, the witness said he did not. Asked if he talked with the plaintiff over the telephone about the case, he said he did not. Benton answered: "No." Later, of his own accord, he corrected this statement by saying that Dr. Moore had on one occasion called him up and had a talk with him which might perhaps come within that description.

Asked if he had ever seen Dr. Benton since he had been in Ohio, he said he had not. President Benton answered: "He came to me." Asked if he had ever seen Dr. Moore under the influence of liquor, he said he had not to his knowledge. Asked if he had based his talk on his own observations, President Benton answered that he had no information.

An attempt was made to draw from Dr. Benton an admission that he became indignant at Dr. Moore when the latter brought him charges of unspeakable misconduct on the part of a member of his faculty who was later dismissed. Dr. Benton stated that it was true that this man had been dismissed, but that the cause, he denied that Dr. Moore had ever brought information of that kind to him.

Questions were put to President Benton having reference to a stock transaction in which he was intimated to have been interested. Dr. Benton attempted to draw out an answer to the effect that he had unloaded stock upon Dr. Moore, but apparently got no satisfaction from that line of attack.

A great part of the afternoon session was devoted to arguments of counsel over the admissibility of certain documents having to do with the prosecution of Moore, without first having put in the record of that case.

At one point in the afternoon session, after President Benton had stated that a recent graduate of Miami named Soule had given him certain information concerning Dr. Moore which caused him to be suspicious, the attorneys for the plaintiff urged him to go ahead and tell what Mr. Soule had told him. The result was the recital of a tale which put the plaintiff in anything but an enviable position as a sale of morphine to a man under treatment in an asylum. According to this story, Dr. Moore participated in the selling of the morphine almost under the eyes of the authorities.

It is predicted that the trial of the case will take several days. The jury is composed of M. C. Bruce of Williston, Ralph Clark of Chittenden, Zeb Duell of South Burlington, Thomas E. Essex, W. H. Gomo of Westford, N. E. Hall of Bolton, J. C. Hodges of Richmond, L. B. Howard of Westford, C. L. Jackson of Milton, Grant Kenyon of Burlington, H. J. Metcalf of Underhill and F. B. Smith of Underhill.

BRADSTREET'S WEEKLY VERMONT TRADE REPORT

Reports to Bradstreet's from ten of the larger centers in the State indicate labor well employed as a whole. Among certain lines of industry more work is employed than in others. Some of the manufacturing interests report as follows: business among the paper mills shows an improvement but low water conditions threaten to curtail the output. Among machine interests new business is coming in slowly. There is little if any change in the volume of business at wooden mills, some plants are doing a goodly share of work while others are employed to capacity. Among the shirt manufacturers new business is confined largely to small orders and these are for immediate delivery. Some new building work is in progress and work on old contracts continues towards completion, the demand for general hardware has been good.

Among the interesting reports for the week in the country, merchants and examiners' report for the year ending June 30, 1913. This shows the phenomenal increase in savings deposits of over seven and a half millions of dollars, the largest increase for any one year in the history of the State. This speaks well for the condition of the individual and but reflects in a small way his condition as related to ability to buy if necessary.

Some of the country merchants are inclined to take a conservative outlook as to trade for the coming winter, while the retail merchants in the larger places consider outlook good. Trade during the past week has been inclined to be light and is attributed to general weather conditions, pleasant and too warm to move early fall goods. Reports from the farmers indicate a fairly reasonably good crop of potatoes, although yield in some instances has been light. Collections generally are reported slow; two failures are reported for the week.

Burlington reports but little change in trade conditions at the mills. Retail merchants report sales have been materially increased by reason of the so-called merchants' week program. Rutland trade is reasonably good for the period although during the past week it has been a little quiet; collections are reported from fair to slow. Reports from St. Albans show no change in general conditions. At Swanton all of the manufacturing plants are employed to capacity. The merchants in this section report that the outlook for fall and winter trade is good.

At St. Johnsbury the mills are well employed and business at the stores is said active; collections are reported inclined to be slow. Montpelier and Barre report a large amount of business at the stone sheds and new business for spring shipments is coming in well. Brattleboro manufacturing plants are well employed and labor well contented with reasonable good for the season of the year. The paper mills at Bellows Falls report new business is coming in reasonably well. At the woodworking plants labor is well employed; building work is light, Brattleboro manufacturers are well employed and the merchants speak of trade at the stores as good as could be expected for this period.
